Become a Writing Fellow

- Writing Fellows are undergraduate students specifically trained to consult students in ENG 101 inside and outside of class while students are engaged in writing activities.
- Writing Fellows are assigned one ENG 101 class and offer focused feedback on questions and issues commonly encountered by first-year writing students.
- Writing Fellows attend the class sessions to which they have been assigned each week. They work with the instructor to facilitate individualized and small-group peer-review sessions that support the outcomes set forth for each essay and those established for the course.
- Writing Fellows work closely with the instructor throughout the course to establish a clear understanding of goals, expectations, and requirements for each of the assigned essays in advance.
